

Atlanta's 12 Best Places to Eat Near the Beltline

Varuni Napoli

This spacious Neapolitan pizzeria in the Morningside neighborhood's a perfect starting point (or rewarding conclusion). A stone's throw from where Piedmont Park's northern tip intersects with the Beltline's interim Eastside Trail — a cleared but unpaved section of the path — Varuni Napoli provides ample opportunity to carbo-load, while its leafy back patio can serve as a spot of respite after a long trek, ideally accompanied by a flute or two of the Prosecco the restaurant keeps on tap.

Must-order: Bastardo pizza with fresh Buffalo mozzarella, salty pepperoni, spicy 'nduja sausage, Pecorino Romano and fresh basil
